BREASTING ATLANTIC IN A TINY MOTH PLANE

MAC DONALD FIGHTING AGAINST GREATEST ODDS

AT MID-ATLANTIC WINDS RAGING TO 50 MILES AN HOUR

HEAVY RAIN IS FALLING AT QUEENSTOWN, VISIBILITY IS BAD

London, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Commander H. C. MacDonald, the reticent naval officer who started alone in a tiny plane on a trans-Atlantic flight yesterday, fought against great odds today if his DeHavilland Gypsy Moth plane remained in the air.

At 5:40 A. M. he had been in the air 18 hours—the time schedule he had set to complete the flight before he left Harbor Grace, Newfoundland yesterday.

And from mid-Atlantic to the Irish coast, and even through most of the mainland of the British Isles, this morning there were reports of high winds, rain and poor visibility.

At mid-Atlantic the winds were reported to be raging at between 45 and 50 miles an hour.

Heavy rain was falling at Queenstown and visibility was reported as bad. Clouds were low and there was no indication of a clearing of the unfavorable weather.

Plymouth, Eng., reported storms and rain in that section and throughout the British Isles the most unfavorable weather conditions were reported.

There was no positive knowledge of the amount of fuel MacDonald carried on this daring adventure.

One report said that the Moth was fueled for 20 hours in the air, giving MacDonald only two hours margin over the time he had set for the flight. He was expected to follow the course which Alcock and Brown followed in 1919 when they flew across in a little more than 16 hours.

One year ago MacDonald started flying. After only a few hours as a solo pilot he went on a hazardous trip to the Near East. He traveled alone, and in this respect he was not unlike Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

But MacDonald risked his life in a plane which, seemingly, was far less stable for a trans-Atlantic flight than the sturdy Spirit of St. Louis. When he went to Newfoundland in September he took over a DeHavilland Gypsy Moth plane.

It is one of the tiniest of the planes now in use in the British Empire. Its wing spread is only 26 feet. It has only 85 horse power, whereas Lindbergh's machine could develop 225 horse power.

MacDonald said, however, that the Moth could develop 100 miles an hour against the winds he expected to meet in the Atlantic and under normal conditions could far exceed that speed.

MacDonald apparently disregarded every safety contrivance. He sailed away from Newfoundland yesterday in face of reports that a storm soon would break—and within seven hours of his leaving heavy rain was falling on the Newfoundland coast.

Stag Lane Airdrome, London, Oct. 18.—If Commander H. C. MacDonald succeeds in his flight across the Atlantic from Newfoundland, he probably will land in Ireland, officials of the airdrome here, MacDonald's home port, said today.

Contrary to some estimates that MacDonald's fuel would be exhausted about noon, airdrome authorities estimated the earliest MacDonald could reach Ireland would be about 1 P. M. (S. A. M. EST.).

Plymouth, Eng., Oct. 18.—The weather had become worse on the south coast of England at noon today. The wind had attained minor gale force, blowing from south to southwest. Visibility was poor owing to the rain. Admiralty stations had no news of Commander MacDonald's progress.

London, Oct. 18.—Grave anxiety was felt this afternoon for the safety of Lieut. Commander H. C. MacDonald, royal navy, retired, who left Harbor Grace, N. F., at 11:40 A. M. EST. yesterday on an attempt to fly across the Atlantic to Ireland or England.

At 10:40 A. M. EST, Commander MacDonald had been gone from Harbor Grace 23 hours, and no word had been received of his whereabouts.

With reckless daring, MacDonald had started across the ocean alone

COMMUNIST IS EXECUTED BY FIRING SQUAD

Lucca, Italy, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Michele Della Maggiore, communist, was executed by a firing squad as sunrise today. He was the first person put to death by law in Italy in 46 years. He was sentenced yesterday by the special military tribunal for the murder of two fascists.

HICKMAN NOW ALONE WITH HIS CONSCIENCE

SITS IN OLD DEATH CELL OF SAN QUENTIN PRISON, CALIFORNIA

WITH OUTWARD CALM WATCHES PASSING OF FEW HOURS LEFT TO HIM

San Quentin State Prison, Cal., Oct. 18.—(UP)—Alone with his conscience in the old death cell of San Quentin, prison, William Edward Hickman will be led from the cell ward calm the passing of the few hours of life left to him.

Shortly after 10 A. M. tomorrow Hickman will be led from the cell over the last short path of San Quentin's condemned and will mount the scaffold to forfeit his life in atonement for the murder of Marion Parker.

Hickman's final farewells were said. And the only legal means that offered a remote possibility of delaying the hanging had been abandoned.

Outside the cell prison guards keeping the death watch marched up and down the corridor.

Just as the last mournful notes of taps sounded out over the walls of San Quentin State prison last night, Hickman started on his march to the death house.

Hickman emerged from the cell and preceded Capt. James Carpenter to the prison guard along the balcony and down one flight of stairs to the ground. Excitement spread throughout the prison as word was whispered from cell to cell that "Eddie is taking his walk up back."

The murmur of many voices broke the usual night stillness of the prison, and there were cries of farewell to Hickman from within the darkened cells as he passed swiftly along the rows of doors.

On the way to the death house, Hickman talked with the Warden James Holohan on commonplace things and never for a moment showed a sign of fear, Holohan said.

"He was one of the coolest men I have ever seen my lot to take to the death house," Holohan said.

Hickman immediately was escorted to the cage of the condemned in San Quentin, a large cell in the death house with walls of wooden slats through which the guards watch the man inside constantly.

Hickman stepped through the door, then turned to the warden.

"I would like to see my mother," he told Holohan.

The warden informed Hickman that this request would be granted if his mother arrived at the prison today.

Hickman made no other special requests of the warden. He made himself familiar with the furnishings of the room, a table, chair and small cot.

Although Hickman told his guards the thought of cheating the law by suicide was remote from his mind, every instrument by which he might attempt to end his life was removed from the cell.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 18.—(UP)—William Edward Hickman will die on the gallows in California tomorrow his broken-hearted mother knowing the exact hour of his death.

Mrs. Eva Hickman, prostrated by grief as the hour of her son's execution approached, has gone into seclusion on a farm somewhere in Missouri, where she has been known, and not until the publicity of the death has died will she return to her home in Kansas City, Capt. Charles Edwards, family adviser, told the United Press.

With her on the farm are her 18-year old daughter, Mary, and her son, Paul, who will try to comfort Mrs. Hickman.

Secretary of Treasury Andrew Mellon Defends Coolidge Economy and Replies to Gov. Smith

ECONOMY NOT JUST SAVING, BUT WISE SPENDING

KNOWLEDGE OF BUSINESS OF GOVERNMENT TAKES TIME TO ACQUIRE

CANNOT BE GAINED IN COURSE OF FEW MONTHS' CAMPAIGN

Washington, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Secretary of Treasury Mellon today issued a statement charging that Governor Alfred E. Smith's speech at Sedalia, Mo., in which the democratic presidential nominee characterized Coolidge economy as a myth, was full of "inaccuracies."

Mellon took exception to Smith's allegation that the economy program of the present administration is "just another republican misrepresentation" and asked that Smith refrain from charging others with misrepresentation and bad faith.

In a formal statement Mellon said he took Smith's speech as a personal attack on his administration of the treasury affairs. He said the knowledge of the business of the government could not be hastily acquired during the course of a few months' campaign.

"Let me begin by correcting Gov. Smith's conception of what this administration understands by economy in government," Mellon said. "Economy is not just saving, but wise spending and the elimination of waste."

Mellon said that Smith's assertion that a reduction in expenditures since 1921 was not due to economy, but the automatic demobilization of the war-time machine was "unfair" as the war had been over two and

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 18.—(UP)—Charles Smith, New York, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, Inc., said today he would appeal a $25 fine imposed yesterday on a charge of being a "public nuisance."

Smith was arrested here after he had established Arkansas headquarters to fight a proposed anti-evolution bill in the next legislature. He was charged with use of the "name of God or of Jesus Christ in obscene and objectionable manner."

Smith's request that he be permitted to testify in his own behalf was denied by Judge Harper Harb, on the ground that being an avowed atheist, he was forbidden by the constitution to testify.

TO FORM DIRIGIBLE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY SOON

OPERATE ON 54-HOUR SCHEDULE BETWEEN EUROPE AND UNITED STATES

DR. HUGO ECKENER, ZEPPELIN COMMANDER, TO MEET INTERESTED FINANCIERS

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 18.—(UP)—Discussions concerning formation of a dirigible transportation corporation, to operate on a 54-hour schedule between Europe and the United States, probably will get underway today between Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, and interested financiers.

Dr. Eckener in New York yesterday revealed that he hoped to formulate corporation, with a capital of $14,000,000, for trans-Atlantic service before the Graf Zeppelin returns to its home port at Friedrichshafen, Germany.

Later Captain E. A. Lehmann, first officer of the Graf Zeppelin, said the conference would be held here today. He would not indicate identity of the Americans interested in the proposed corporation.

Eckener and officers of the Graf Zeppelin were expected here this morning from New York to oversee a few of the plans for repairing the torn fin of the great air liner and then proceed to Philadelphia where a celebration has been arranged in their honor.

Meanwhile the Graf Zeppelin continues to be of great interest to thousands of visitors from New York and nearby points. Perhaps 20,000 persons visited the ship yesterday.

GOVERNOR SMITH IS ENCOURAGED OVER CHICAGO

LOCAL DEMOCRATIC LEADERS TELL HIM IT IS BLOWING HIS WAY

MAKE SCORES OF PLANS FOR VARIOUS TURBULENT DEMONSTRATIONS

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith found the windy city rustling with politics today and the local democratic leaders told him it was blowing his way.

Having come here under the mistaken impression that he might rest for a day, only to find scores of plans for turbulent demonstrations, the democratic nominee acceded to the pleas of the leaders and gave himself up to two intensive days of campaigning.

Delegations besieged him at his hotel headquarters. Lieutenants rushed in with plans for this or that parade, photographers of the metropolitan press boomed flashlights in his ears, a hundred newspapermen assembled for a conference with him. Between times, he worked on the speech he is to deliver at a downtown armory tomorrow night, closing his personal campaign in the west, or conferred with state officials of the democratic party.

The party officials, headed by Thomas Donovan, Illinois national committeeman, and former Mayor Carter Harrison, all talked of a new drift they sensed in the air. They are reporting defections in the farm ranks and disturbances in the republican regime which they say may combine to form an unexpected result election day.

Certainly the welcome received by the governor on his arrival at 10 P. M. last night gave some indications of Smith's popularity here. It was by far the greatest demonstration he has witnessed. The big lobby of the union station was packed to overflowing and tens of thousands lined the streets, which were guarded by police stationed only a few feet apart.

The governor's cars were shot through the streets at 50 miles an hour to bring him to his hotel. There he found he was unable to go to bed as he had planned. Instead the leaders clamored about for official sanction of their plans.

Democratic leaders from other sections of the middle west are expected later in the day. These include lieutenants from Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana and Nebraska. They are coming to talk over plans for the final efforts in their states.

Meanwhile large crowds moved in and about his downtown hotel. They remained far into the night shouting incoherently about "Al" and they assembled early this morning to catch a glimpse of him if he went out.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The Chicago Tribune's account of Gov. Alfred E. Smith's arrival here carried also an account of how the crowd used copies of an early edition of that paper in a bonfire, set off in honor of the democratic presidential nominee.

The front page of the Tribune carried a cartoon depicting a huge crowd shouting welcome to Gov. Smith and with the G. O. P. elephant leaping from an office window remarking:

"It's lucky for me that eagerness to see him doesn't mean eagerness to vote for him."

The Tribune said members of the crowd around the bonfire shouted, "We'll vote for him too," as they tossed copies of the paper in the fire.

INSCRIPTION ON GAS TANK OF SEAPLANE

TANK BROUGHT TO COPENHAGEN BY MOTOR BOAT LEIF

WRITING IN LEAD PENCIL, ONLY PARTS OF WORDS DECIPHERABLE

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 18.—(UP)—What may have been a final message from Roald Amundsen and his five companions, lost in the Arctic last summer, was found today on a gasoline tank of Amundsen's seaplane, picked up at sea.

The tank was brought here by the Norwegian motor boat Leif. Two lines written in pencil, and nearly obscured, were found on the plane. So far, it has been impossible to decipher any intelligible message, only parts of words having been made out.

Copenhagen, Oct. 18.—The Norwegian motor boat Leif arrived this morning at Valdersund and reported she had picked up the gasoline tank of the Latham seaplane in which Roald Amundsen and five others started on a flight to the Arctic in June.

The tank contained 30 litres of gasoline, the commander of the motor boat reported.

The motor boat was positive that the tank was that of the French seaplane as inscribed on one side of the tank were the words:

"Essence competence, 600 litres, Hydro-Avian, Latham."

The tank was found at 64 degrees and 52 minutes northern and 8 degrees 50 minutes eastern longitude.

Captain H. Riser Larsen, Norwegian explorer who spent many weeks in the Arctic this year searching for the party, said the find proved beyond doubt that the Latham had been forced to land at Amundsen with five companions left in June, Norway, June 18, bound either for Bear Island or King's Bay.

So far as is known their plane never was seen after late in the evening of June 18. There have been many unconfirmed reports of finding traces of the craft but all were unconfirmed.

3 MEN ARE BURNED SERIOUSLY, AS OIL FIRES IN TRAIN WRECK

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 18.—(UP)—Three men were burned seriously today when two oil cars in a long Pennsylvania railroad freight burst into flames after the train was wrecked here.

The injured men are Engineer Harden, Pittsburgh; Fireman David Newcomer, Pittsburgh, and John Soll, brakeman, East Conemaugh, Pa.

The wreck occurred when a brake rigging dropped on the tracks. Ten cars were wrecked and seven were destroyed by flames.

MODERN GIRLS THREATENED BY AGE OF JAZZ

Washington, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Modern American girls, keeping pace with the whirl of the present jazz age, are being threatened with physical breakdowns, according to the U. S. public health service.

Studies made by some physicians of the health service indicate that keeping up with world modernization has caused a slight increase in tuberculosis among young women.

Hurried social life, the strain from school or business, not taking sufficient time to eat, insufficient rest and scanty clothing wear out the body and result in a breakdown, the public health service warned young girls today.

Modern girls are dressing sensibly now, except for high heels and some exposures of the body or limbs, due to fashion's decree, the public health service believes. Women even dress more sensibly and more comfortably than men.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale
by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WAN
Wan was the name of a pet Pekingese dog. He was at the dog show and was pleased when he had won a prize. "But all of them didn't like it when I won the prize," said Wan to the other dogs. "They said I hadn't the right shaped neck, and that I should weigh a pound or two or three more to be the right size." "If they said such things how did you manage to get the very first prize of all?" asked the other dogs. "The judges gave it to me."

"The Judges Gave it to Me."
"Because the judges gave it to me," said Wan. "The ones who did all this talking were the ones whose dogs did not win." "It was poor sportsmanship." "It was," said one of the other dogs who had won second prize. "I think people don't know what the word sportsmanship means when they are such poor sports as to be beaten and then argue about it." "If a dog lived in an alley and fed out of garbage cans I wouldn't fight or be annoyed if he happened to win first prize." "That's the right idea," said the other dogs. "Well, it's the people, not the dogs, who do it over the prizes."

Wanted Her Name
Four-year-old Betty was getting acquainted with the new neighbor next door. She was very enthusiastic about "Parker's little girl." Mother said she shouldn't call her that but "Jean. Anne, or Elizabeth—something like that." "But I don't know how to call her," Betty replied disheartened. "I asked her what the front of her was called and she just 'bared at me.'"

"That's the right idea," said the other dogs. "Well, it's the people, not the dogs, who do it over the prizes."

"There were a good many disputes about my winning the prize," said Wan.

"No matter," said the other dogs. "You won it and you deserve it. You have a handsome face and a beautiful body."

"Thanks," said Wan. "But you know I don't care so much for beauty. I am very fond of cream. My mistress gives a lot of it to me. Yes, cream is far better than beauty."

"They said," commenced a dog who had won prizes in former years, but not at this show, "that there were fine dogs this year, which were brought up in our own land."

"Yes, they said that our home dogs were improving all the time and that we needn't think foreign dogs were the only ones worth noticing in the future."

"That's fine," all the dogs barked.

"Well," said Wan, "I stirred up an argument, and I made the show a little different by not having the same winners as last year."

"You did indeed," grinned one of the dogs who had been a prize winner the year before.

Then they all received ribbons and badges and cups and medals and there was great rejoicing and happiness at the dog show, while everyone forgot arguments and such silly things.

And the dogs barked as dogs should do to show they were the animals everyone had come to see, and so there couldn't possibly be any mistake about the show being a regular dog show.

PUZZLES

What letters are the hardest workers? The bees (B's).

What flower is often impressed on little boys? Lady's slippers.

Which of the stars should be subject to game-laws? Shooting stars.

What asks no questions and yet requires many answers? The telephone bell.

What is always at the head of fashion, yet always out of date? The letter F.

How is it that summer goes so quickly? Because there is so often an evening mist.

What is the difference between a school teacher and a robber? The teacher says hands down, the robber says hands up.

What is the difference between man and butter? The older man grows, the weaker he gets. The older butter grows the stronger it gets.

DEBATE ISSUES AT WOMEN VOTERS MEET

Mrs. Albee Ladd, Hoover Pleader and
Mrs. Cora Lewis, Smith Backer
on Same Program

APPEAL TO WOMEN

Both Speakers Stress Humanitarian
Traits of Their Respective
Candidates

"Somebody blundered" in announcing a radio meeting at the farmers' room of the court house Tuesday evening. The League of Women Voters announced a meeting there in the Dispatch a week ago in the weekly papers last Friday, and in the Dispatch on Monday evening. The use of the room was granted them by the county commissioners on the plea that while they would hold a political meeting, it would be a bi-partisan meeting, both sides being represented.

That they lived up to their contract is shown by the following extracts from the speeches of Mrs. Albee Ladd, special pleader for Herbert Hoover and Mrs. Cora Lewis, representative of Governor Al Smith.

Mrs. Ladd: "Orphaned in early childhood, at the age of 13 years Hoover, a timid, retiring, but resolute lad started out for himself to earn, not only his living, but an education. He has learned what it means to work for a living and it has given him a strong sympathy for what we call, for lack of a better name, the working people. As chairman of the better homes association, Hoover has built 30,000 working men's homes."

Mrs. Lewis: "When Alfred Smith was 13, his father died and his mother came home from the funeral with a few cents in her pocket, put her children to bed and went out to hunt a job. It was necessary for Alfred to leave school at that time, to help support the family. But he went back later. However, his experience of early poverty has given him a sympathy for the workers that has been exemplified in the legislation he has put through as governor of the great state of New York."

Mrs. Ladd: "Mr. Smith says he will enforce the eighteenth amendment although, he doesn't believe in it. As governor of New York he signed the bill that made the Volstead act inoperative in New York and he did it over the protest of numerous delegations from border states who knew that it would be difficult for them to enforce the law if New York was pouring liquor over their borders. Mr. Hoover believes in the 18th amendment and will enforce it."

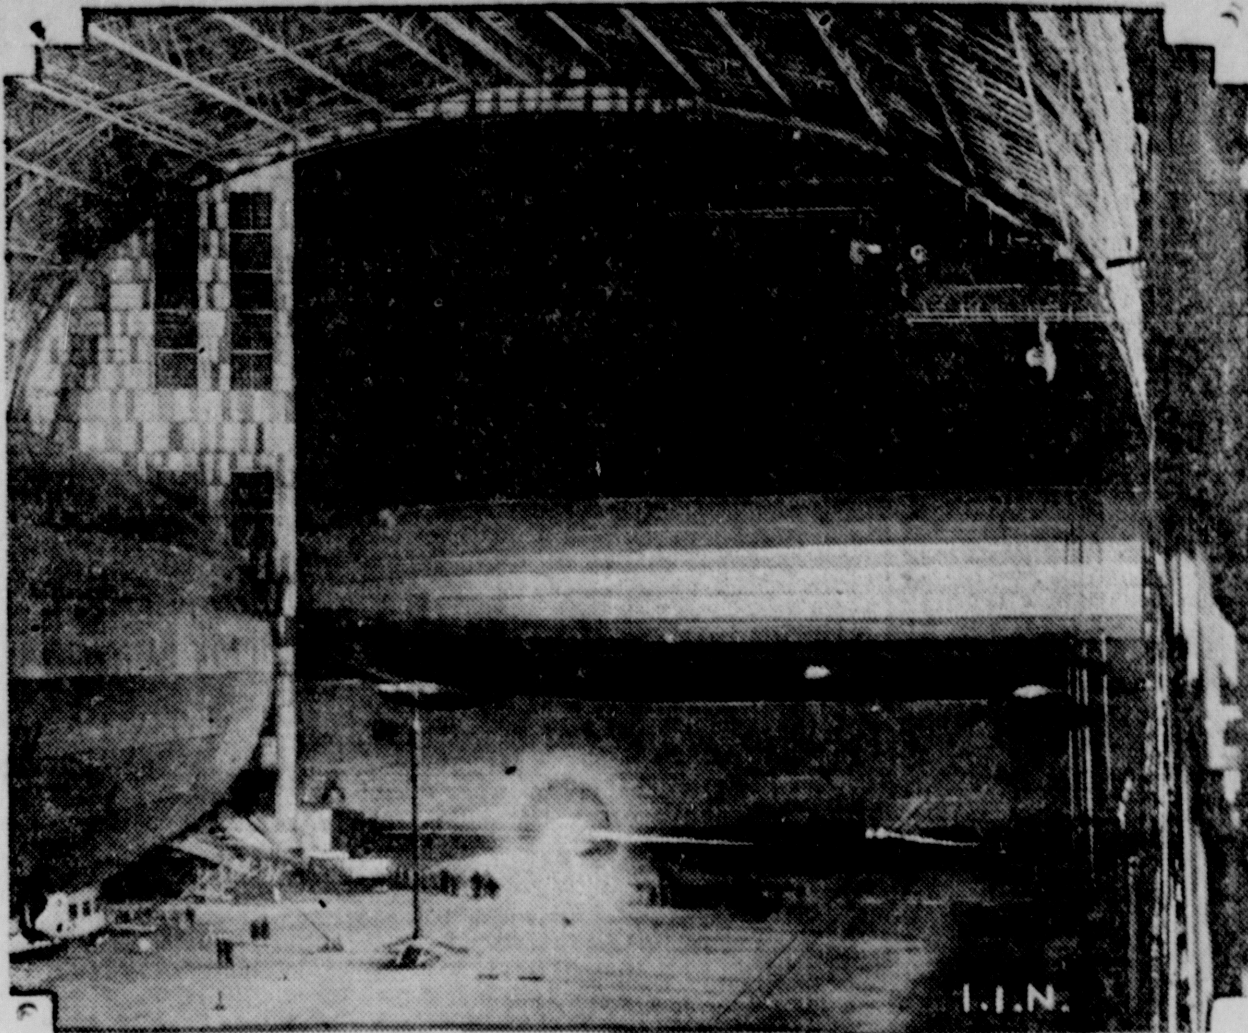

Mrs. Lewis: "Mr. Smith did sign the Mullin bill, but it was passed by both houses of a republican legislature."

Mrs. Ladd: "Mr. Smith says he believes in the Underwood tariff and when that bill was in operation, the farmers of the northwest got two and a fraction cents per pound protection on butter—now they get 12 I can remember what farm products sold for under a democratic tariff under Cleveland, and I can also remember the long lines that stood for hours to get free soup, in Minneapolis."

Mrs. Lewis: "Mr. Hoover has said that the farmer should stand upon his own feet. The farmer has always stood upon his own feet. What he wants is for other people to get off of his toes. The McNary-Haugen bill, which was twice vetoed by a republican president, is an adequate protection for the farmer—and the only effective protection. The manufacturers are protected by the tariff and if I should place a tariff bill on one end of this table and the McNary-Haugen bill on the other end, I'll venture that there isn't a person in this room that could tell the difference except for the words equalization fee."

Mrs. Ladd: "Mr. Hoover has proved his executive ability in the Poxer rebellion, in feeding the starving Belgians and the German women and children, and in the position of food administrator, to which he was called by a democratic president. Although he handled millions of dollars, his accounts were audited by expert auditors and every penny was accounted for—his honesty and integrity has never been assailed. When called to go into Belgium, Mr. Hoover was wealthier than he has

On the Inside Looking Out

An unusual view taken from inside the Navy's great hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., showing part of the dirigible Los Angeles in her berth and the side of the Graf Zeppelin just outside the door. The big air liner was moored to the mast instead of being walked into the hangar because of the lateness of her arrival.

ver been since. If he could have looked after his own interests, he was in a fair way to become one of the great financiers of the world. For three days he debated the question as to whether he would seek his own fortune, or help save the starving Belgians. Service won over self."

Mrs. Lewis: "A nation is only an aggregation of states. Any one who can be a successful governor of the great state of New York will make a successful president. Mr. Smith's political ability led him into politics at an early age. He might have made more in other lines, but he felt that he could do more for others by remaining in politics. He was a genius for the science of politics which is shown in his appointments—always appointing the best man for the place, whether Catholic, Protestant or Jew. It has been said that Tammany would control him, if he became president. But it didn't control him on the question of his running mate. Smith said that he wouldn't run on a ticket with William R. Hearst and Tammany tried to force him to do this, but he won out—that was what delayed his nomination."

Both speakers stressed the humanitarian traits of their candidates. Mrs. Ladd emphasizing the fact that Mr. Hoover wants every child to have a good home and good home influences. Mrs. Lewis stressed what Governor Smith had done for the rural schools—not the parochial, but the public schools, of New York.

If the two speakers were trying to appeal to the psychology of women, it would seem as if the minds of women were quite similar to those of men, as all of their arguments were those that have been used in mixed audiences since the beginning of the campaign. As a matter of fact, both sexes seem to have a good many human traits and human prejudices. Both of the speakers were fluent, earnest and mentally keen and the very fact that these two women are employed by their respective parties to go all over the country making political speeches proves that the suffrage of women has affected our political thinking and the tremendous poll of women's votes, in November, will prove that women will use the suffrage when they think that they have something to gain by its use.

Tariff Talk

By DR. HUBERT WORK

ERRONEOUS impressions have gone forth, and are spreading, that there is no material difference between the Democratic and Republican stand on the tariff this year; or, sequentially many are prone to say that the tariff is not an issue. That impression is wholly erroneous and should be corrected.

The tariff is an issue in this campaign.

Recall the Democratic platform adopted at Houston. It endorsed a competitive tariff, quite different from a prior tariff. Furthermore Governor Smith let the cat out of the bag by commending the ratification of Underwood Act.

The Republican, of course, are standing for a tariff for adequate protection for American workers and farmers and present competition with low wages abroad.

NORTH PRAIRIE

The ladies aid meets with Mrs. Glanville Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson and Byron were callers at the Elmer Peterson home Sunday evening.

Mrs. Ben Grieson and Ruth visited at Charlie Olson's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Babcock and Margaret visited at Morecomb's Friday.

Miss Caroline Walz, the county nurse, visited school in District No. 84.

Miss Julia Tougas was a Little Falls caller Wednesday afternoon.

The Lucky 13 club will meet with Mrs. Ole Friday. Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Leroy Sewell are the leaders. There are 12 members who completed the course in millinery this year. Five meetings have been held with an attendance of 53 members and 14 visitors. Some of the things taught were selection, considers the hat in respect to wearer and the occasion for which it is to be worn.

A study of foundation fabrics and wires, the application of millinery stitches to millinery fabric, color, alteration of commercial shapes, material and coverings.

Construction of hat and trimming were then taken up. The making of leaves, flowers and other trimmings and suggestions for their application to the hat. Then the completed hat shown for criticism and discussion. Some hats were exhibited at the county fair at Pequot. All the members feel that it has been very much worth while for the time spent.

DEBATE ISSUES AT WOMEN VOTERS MEET

Mrs. Albee Ladd, Hoover Pleader and
Mrs. Cora Lewis, Smith Backer
on Same Program

APPEAL TO WOMEN

Both Speakers Stress Humanitarian
Traits of Their Respective
Candidates

"Somebody blundered" in announcing a radio meeting at the farmers' room of the court house Tuesday evening. The League of Women Voters announced a meeting there in the Dispatch a week ago in the weekly papers last Friday, and in the Dispatch on Monday evening. The use of the room was granted them by the county commissioners on the plea that while they would hold a political meeting, it would be a bi-partisan meeting, both sides being represented.

That they lived up to their contract is shown by the following extracts from the speeches of Mrs. Albee Ladd, special pleader for Herbert Hoover and Mrs. Cora Lewis, representative of Governor Al Smith.

Mrs. Ladd: "Orphaned in early childhood, at the age of 13 years, Hoover, a timid, retiring, but resolute lad started out for himself to earn, not only his living, but an education. He has learned what it means to work for a living and it has given him a strong sympathy for what we call, for lack of a better name, the working people. As chairman of the better homes association, Hoover has built 30,000 working men's homes."

Mrs. Lewis: "When Alfred Smith was 13, his father died and his mother came home from the funeral with a few cents in her pocket, put her children to bed and went out to hunt a job. It was necessary for Alfred to leave school at that time, to help support the family. But he went back later. However, his experience of early poverty has given him a sympathy for the workers that has been exemplified in the legislation he has put through as governor of the great state of New York."

Mrs. Ladd: "Mr. Smith says he will enforce the eighteenth amendment although, he doesn't believe in it. As governor of New York he signed the bill that made the Volstead act inoperative in New York and he did it over the protest of numerous delegations from border states who knew that it would be difficult for them to enforce the law if New York was pouring liquor over their borders. Mr. Hoover believes in the 18th amendment and will enforce it."

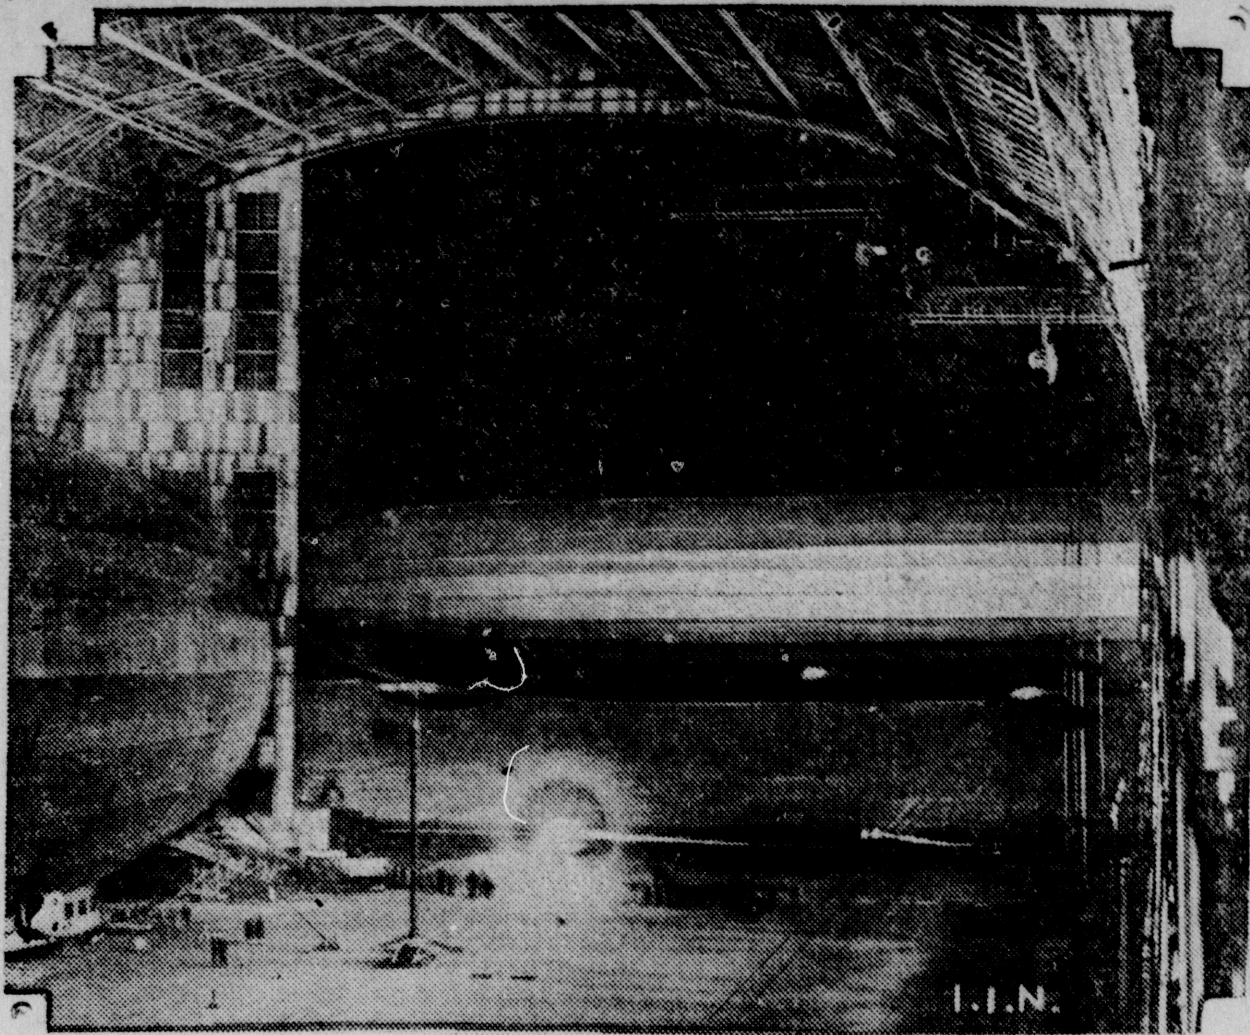

Mrs. Lewis: "Mr. Smith did sign the Mullin bill, but it was passed by both houses of a republican legislature."

Mrs. Ladd: "Mr. Smith says he believes in the Underwood tariff and when that bill was in operation, the farmers of the northwest got two and a fraction cents per pound protection on butter—now they get 12. I can remember what farm products sold for under a democratic tariff under Cleveland, and I can also remember the long lines that stood for hours to get free soup, in Minneapolis."

Mrs. Lewis: "Mr. Hoover has said that the farmer should stand upon his own feet. The farmer has always stood upon his own feet. What he wants is for other people to get off of his toes. The McNary-Haugen bill, which was twice vetoed by a republican president, is an adequate protection for the farmer—and the only effective protection. The manufacturers are protected by the tariff and if I should place a tariff bill on one end of this table and the McNary-Haugen bill on the other end, I'll venture that there isn't a person in this room that could tell the difference except for the words equalization fee."

Mrs. Ladd: "Mr. Hoover has proved his executive ability in the Poxer rebellion, in feeding the starving Belgians and the German women and children, and in the position of food administrator, to which he was called by a democratic president. Although he handled millions of dollars, his accounts were audited by expert auditors and every penny was accounted for—his honesty and integrity has never been assailed. When called to go into Belgium, Mr. Hoover was wealthier than he has ver been since. If he could have looked after his own interests, he was in a fair way to become one of the great financiers of the world. For three days he debated the question as to whether he would seek his own fortune, or help save the starving Belgians. Service won over self."

Mrs. Lewis: "A nation is only an aggregation of states. Any one who can be a successful governor of this great state of New York will make a successful president. Mr. Smith's political ability led him into politics at an early age. He might have made more in other lines, but he felt that he could do more for others by remaining in politics. He was a genius for the science of politics which is shown in his appointments—always appointing the best man for the place, whether Catholic, Protestant or Jew. It has been said that Tammany would control him, if he became president. But it didn't control him on the question of his running mate. Smith said that he wouldn't run on a ticket with William R. Hearst and Tammany tried to force him to do this, but he won out—that was what delayed his nomination."

Both speakers stressed the humanitarian traits of their candidates. Mrs. Ladd emphasizing the fact that Mr. Hoover wants every child to have a good home and good home influences. Mrs. Lewis stressed what Governor Smith had done for the rural schools—not the parochial, but the public schools, of New York.

If the two speakers were trying to appeal to the psychology of women, it would seem as if the minds of women were quite similar to those of men, as all of their arguments were those that have been used in mixed audiences since the beginning of the campaign. As a matter of fact, both sexes seem to have a good many human traits and human prejudices. Both of the speakers were fluent, earnest and mentally keen and the very fact that these two women are employed by their respective parties to go all over the country making political speeches proves that the suffrage for women has affected our political thinking and the tremendous poll of women's votes, in November, will prove that women will use the suffrage when they think that they have something to gain by its use.

Tariff Talk

By DR. HUBERT WORK

ERRONEOUS impressions have gone forth, and are spreading, that there is no material difference between the Democratic and Republican stand on the tariff this year; or, sequentially many are prone to say that the tariff is not an issue. That impression is wholly erroneous and should be corrected.

The tariff is an issue in this campaign.

Recall the Democratic platform adopted at Houston. It endorsed a competitive tariff, quite different from a protective tariff. Furthermore, Governor Smith let the cat out of the bag by commending the ruinous Underwood Act.

The Republicans, of course, are standing out for adequate protection for American workers and farmers, and present competition with low wages abroad.

NORTH PRAIRIE

The ladies aid meets with Mrs. Glanville Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson and Byron were callers at the Elmer Peterson home Sunday evening.

Mrs. Ben Grieson and Ruth visited at Charlie Olson's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Babcock and Margaret visited at Morecomb's Friday.

Miss Caroline Walz, the county nurse, visited school in District No. 84.

Miss Julia Tougas was a Little Falls caller Wednesday afternoon.

The Lucky 13 club will meet with Mrs. Ole Friday. Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Leroy Sewell are the leaders.

There are 12 members who completed the course in millinery this year. Five meetings have been held with an attendance of 53 members and 14 visitors. Some of the things taught were selection, considers the hat in respect to wearer and the occasion for which it is to be worn.

A study of foundation fabrics and wires, the application of millinery stitches to millinery fabric, color, alteration of commercial shapes, material and coverings.

Construction of hat and trimming were then taken up. The making of leaves, flowers and other trimmings and suggestions for their application to the hat. Then the completed hat shown for criticism and discussion. Some hats were exhibited at the county fair at Pequot. All the members feel that it has been very much worth while for the time spent.

THE TARIFF TANGLES OF A CANDIDATE

It begins to look as if Governor Smith wants to establish a commission form of government at Washington. So far, three of his campaign "prescriptions" call for commissions, says the Minneapolis Journal.

First, there is Farm Relief. The Governor says he doesn't know just what ought to be done. He is clear on the main principle, but "the mechanics remain to be devised." For this task he proposes a commission of experts.

Second, there is the Seaway. The Governor has always been a strong opponent of the St. Lawrence route, and in favor of the New York route. But, having been nominated for President, he is willing to "restudy the question." For that purpose, he would have a commission of engineers.

And now there is the Tariff. Governor Smith wants to take it out of politics, that is to say, out of Congress. So at Louisville he proposed another commission. This third in the lengthening list of commissions to get the answers to questions which Governor Smith can't answer, has all the vagueness of his other proposals, although he read nine carefully prepared points into his speech at Louisville. Here is Governor Smith's outline in Point Six of his new tariff commission:

I favor a tariff commission made up as hereinafter referred to with ample facilities and resources, with broadened powers, and with provision for the prompt and periodical publication of its reports which shall be in such form as to present serviceable and practical information. In the belief that provision for a bi-partisan tariff commission promotes rather than eliminates politics, I would ask Congress to give authority to appoint a commission of five members from among the best qualified in the country to deal with the problem, irrespective of party affiliations, with a salary sufficiently large to induce them to devote themselves exclusively to this important work. I would consider it my duty to see that this commission was left absolutely free to perform the important duties imposed upon it by law without the slightest suggestion or interference from any outside agency, official or otherwise. I would believe it to be my duty to build up the commission in public confidence and support.

What are to be the powers of this new commission? The Governor does not say.

Is it to investigate and report recommendations to Congress? The Governor does not say. But if Congress is to continue to legislate on the tariff, how will the new scheme take the tariff out of politics? Again he does not say.

Or is the new commission to do the tariff legislating under powers delegated to it by Congress? The Governor does not say. But if that is his plan, how is he going to get around the provision of the Constitution that all tariff legislation must originate in the House, and the Supreme Court decisions that this power cannot be delegated?

No doubt, Governor Smith thinks that, having laid down the general principle, he can let someone else "devise the mechanics."

The ignorance of governmental processes he reveals in Point Six is also evident in others of the nine. For example, he undertakes to pledge the Democratic Party to a certain course of action on the tariff that will hurt no one. But what good is that pledge? The Ways and Means Committee draws the tariff bills, and its majority, if Democratic, would write a tariff-for-revenue-only bill. That would be in accord not only with the historical and traditional position of the party, but with the individual views of the present Democratic members of the committee.

If Governor Smith were President, he could not dictate to a party majority, neither in the committee nor on the floor. His pledge is worthless.

OLDER BOYS' CONFERENCES

THERE will be four sections of the 18th Minnesota Older Boys' Conferences which are held under the auspices of the State Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Minnesota this year. They will be held in the following places:

Fargo, for North Dakota and N. W. Minnesota, Nov. 16 to 18.
Albert Lea, for S. E. Minnesota; and Tracy for S. W. Minnesota, Nov. 23 to 25.

Duluth, for N. E. Minnesota, Nov. 30 to Dec. 2.

In commemoration of the 19th Centenary of Christ's Ministry on Earth, the conference theme will be "We Would See Jesus" and the program will be given over largely to inspirational addresses and discussions of boys' problems. All delegates will be entertained in the homes of the community in which the conference is held.

Last year the conference for N. E. Minnesota was held at Chisholm and Charles Olson of Nashauk was elected president to preside at the Duluth conference this year. The boys in Brainerd will be invited to attend the Duluth conference.

These gatherings have grown in attendance from 55 in 1910 to more than 1,000 during the last four years and are productive of much good.

DEADLY CARBON MONOXIDE

ALTHOUGH we have had only a few cold days so far this fall, we are already beginning to read in the papers of deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning. Usually it is some man tinkering with his car and leaving the garage doors closed because of the chill winds. The family misses him, makes a search, and finds him dead.

Carbon monoxide from the automobile exhaust is a deadly, quick acting poison. Under no circumstances should a person remain in a small garage with his engine running and the doors closed.

But opening the doors is not always enough. When there is no breeze, death may occur in an open garage when the engine is left running. If it is necessary to run the engine, it is safest to go outside, or go to a larger, well ventilated garage.

Deaths have also been reported where persons were driving in closed cars, or sitting in parked cars with the engine running, if the wind happened to be in such a direction that it drove the exhaust fumes up through the floor boards. It is safest to keep at least one window partly open, even in the coldest weather.

Back from Jaws of Death

Safe and sound, with his wife and two sons, Bert Hassell, pilot of the ill-fated plane Greater Rockford, which set out to Stockholm, Sweden, arrived in New York from Halifax, N. S., aboard the S. S. Frederick VIII. With Hassell and two others, the Greater Rockford was forced down in Greenland on what was to be a three-legged flight across the ocean. The pilot's sons are Victor and John.

DOMINICAN SISTERS PRAISE FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

"FOR COLDS AND BODY BUILDING IT DOES A WORLD OF GOOD," THEY WRITE

The Dominican Sisters of St. Dominic Monastery, La Crosse, Wisconsin, have found that for treating and preventing colds and building up the aged and sickly, Father John's Medicine is so effective that they have used it daily for many years.

Following is part of a letter from the Mother Prioress:—"We have found out that there is nothing better than Father John's Medicine for colds, or building up the body. It always helps our weak or delicate sisters, and those who have colds soon recover and grow stronger. We cannot praise Father John's Medicine too highly. We cheerfully recommend it for colds and as a body builder and hope that all who use it may obtain the same wonderful results as we do: it does a world of good."

Father John's Medicine is absolutely free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. For 73 years it has won similar tributes of praise as the safe family medicine for colds and body building.

Fur Most Highly Prized

The sable is the most valuable of all furs. It is soft and silken, deep brown, often slightly silvered. It is found only in Siberia, Japanese and Chinese sable, local varieties of less value, are usually dyed or topped.

A Dismal Note

"All cats can't be optimists," says Prowl, the farm cat in Farm and Fireside. "We're all full o' fiddlestricks and if I wanna play mournful tunes on mine, that's my business."

Passing Observation

No one ever really knows how silly he can look until after the pictures taken on a vacation trip have been developed and printed.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION
FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Consider the diplodocus

The diplodocus was the most gigantic animal that ever lived. It was eighty-five feet long and weighed scores of tons. Yet despite its tremendous bulk it had a brain the size of an English walnut.

Millions of years ago the diplodocus flourished. But when conditions changed, it was unable to adapt itself to a new existence. Other animals, less strong, but more intelligent, invaded its domain. And so, with the unceasing march of progress, its race died out and vanished.

It is just as necessary today as it was in the Upper Jurassic period to keep abreast of the times. Conditions are changing under our very eyes. New inventions, new products are constantly being brought forward to make life easier and happier. If we do not take advantage of them, we fall behind the procession.

Advertisements are the modern bulletins of progress. Fur Most Highly Prized

The sable is the most valuable of all furs. It is soft and silken, deep brown, often slightly silvered. It is found only in Siberia. Japanese and Chinese sable, local varieties of less value, are usually dyed or topped.

A Dismal Note

"All cats can't be optimists," says Prowl, the farm cat in Farm and Fireside. "We're all full o' fiddlestrings and if I wanna play mournful tunes on mine, that's my business."

Passing Observation

No one ever really knows how silly he can look until after the pictures taken on a vacation trip have been developed and printed.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Consider the diplodocus

The diplodocus was the most gigantic animal that ever lived. It was eighty-five feet long and weighed scores of tons. Yet despite its tremendous bulk it had a brain the size of an English walnut.

Millions of years ago the diplodocus flourished. But when conditions changed, it was unable to adapt itself to a new existence. Other animals, less strong, but more intelligent, invaded its domain. And so, with the unceasing march of progress, its race died out and vanished.

It is just as necessary today as it was in the Upper Jurassic period to keep abreast of the times. Conditions are changing under our very eyes. New inventions, new products are constantly being brought forward to make life easier and happier. If we do not take advantage of them, we fall behind the procession.

NEW COUNTRY CLUB COURSE WILL BE 214 YARDS OVER OLD

3046 YARD COURSE TO BE READY FOR PLAY NEXT SUMMER

ALL GREENS TO HAVE WASHINGTON BENT GRASS; 3 DOGLEGS IN NEW COURSE

IMPROVEMENT TO COST $3,000; $2,000 ALREADY SPENT, PUMP-ING SYSTEM INSTALLED

The Brainerd Country Club course when ready for play next year with all grass greens will have an increase of 214 yards for the nine holes over the yardage of the former course, thus making the course an even more difficult par than previously.

So complete will be the change in the course that it may be considered an entirely new course, one that will match favorably with other nine-hole grass green courses in the northwest.

The vast improvement in playing conditions will be the principal factor in increasing the popularity of the Country Club and will mean a great deal to Brainerd inasmuch as it will center the golfing activities of tourists in the lake region here.

The difference as outlined in the yardage of the respective holes may be ascertained somewhat by the following, comparing the 1928 course with the 1929:

Holes	1928	1929
1	460	500
2	270	343
3	415	415
4	322	410
5	230	320
6	177	135
7	345	283
8	458	490
9	155	150
Total	2832	3046

In making the course an interesting one for play three holes will be on the order of doglegs, two additional from last year.

The first green will be reached after shooting around a dogleg and the fifth and eighth will be similar. The course previously had but one dogleg, that on the eighth fairway.

Work on the new course has continued for the past three months. Pipes have been laid, greens constructed and grass planted. Improvement will also be noticed next year around the club house where sod has been laid and grass planted. The course improvement is estimated at $300 a hole or about $3,000 complete. This expenditure will also mean an increase in the cost of future upkeep and the employment of additional help, although the expected increase in playing members and receipts from tourists will more than balance the cost.

A blue print chart showing the course as it will be next year has been posted in the display windows of the Brainerd Dispatch.

Already $2,000 has been spent in improving the course. Ten men have been employed on the work. All greens will have Washington bent grass, the best grass for greens in use. A pumping system has been installed to take care of the watering with the water secured from different points on the grounds. It is expected that play on the new grass greens will open about the middle of next June or the early part of July, depending on weather conditions. Already the grass is coming up on several of the new greens.

Members of the greens committee in charge of the work are: C. A. Ryan, Dan Crosswell and M. R. Smith.

ARMY'S HUSKY SQUAD SHAPES FOR HARVARD GAME

FINAL WORKOUT IS TAKEN TODAY AT CAMBRIDGE

STRANGE TO FIND CRIMSON FIGURING IN MAJOR GRIDIRON ENGAGEMENT

HARVARD REPRESENTS REAL TEST OF WEST POINT'S STRENGTH

By FRANK GETTY (United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Oct. 18. — (UP)—The Army's powerful football squad, probably the best in the east, goes over to Cambridge, Mass., today, for a final workout in preparation for Saturday's game against Harvard.

It is strange to find the crimson, after so many seasons of disappointment, figuring as a participant in the major gridiron engagement of any given week, yet such is the case.

Harvard represents a real test of West Point's strength, and upon the showing of the Cadets the day after tomorrow depends their chances or recognition as one of the year's leading eleven.

The Army has not met Harvard at football for 18 years. The Cadets have high hopes of wiping out the memories of successive defeats dating back to 1895. In all the years that West Point and Harvard met on the gridiron, the Cadets won not a single game.

This year, things are different. Head Coach "Biff" Jones has one of the strongest of modern Army teams moving on Cambridge today.

Harvard has improved over the past two seasons, but still lacks the power and football brains of the Cadets.

Since their break with the Navy, football authorities at West Point have been at pains to develop the best possible team, in order that the disparagement between the gridiron strength of the service academies might be accepted generally as the real reason for the severance of athletic relations.

Harvard and the Army were regular football rivals from 1895 to 1910, but in that period the Crimson always was victorious.

Jones is taking to Cambridge a strong and veteran line, except for the ends, and a backfield which includes Cagle, Murrell, Hutchison and Nave. Harvard has shown versatility and power this season, but an Army victory is anticipated.

The Crimson has not been scored on this season, a situation which most likely may be remedied on Saturday.

AFTER THE GUARD HAD DESERTED

THE owner walked swiftly among them, studying the faces and figures through shrewd, half-shut eyes and making an almost imperceptible motion toward one here and one there and another yonder. He was weeding out his help and doing it impartially and imperiously, as was his wont. The foreman walked by his side, noting.

After the owner jumped into his automobile and shot away the foreman went among the hands delivering the sentences. Presently he approached a slight girl who was pasting labels on cans. She had been watching through the corners of her eyes and whitened a little as he stopped by her side.

"I go, too," she said, anticipating him. "I saw it in the way old Half Cent spat his eyes at me. When do I go?"

"You may work out the day." "And not come back? All right. But you know, Mr. Halstead, that I'm the best worker you've got in this department. I'm small, but I says it's all muscle and knots. I've never been sick a day in my life and never get tired, and never shirk when your back is turned, like some do. And—and I like the work I do. It ain't just the number of cents it brings in."

"I know, I know," a little wearily. "But you understand how 'tis. I tried to say something for your tablemate, Rosa, and you noticed how Mr. Barkes whirled and looked at me. If it wasn't for so many depending on me I'd like to be going myself, but—" He drew himself together sharply, glancing about to see if any of the others had overheard. "You—of course, you'll never hint to anybody that I'm dissatisfied. Clara, I'm not. I can't afford to be."

"You've known me too long to say that, Mr. Halstead," said Clara gently. "I guess we're all in the same boat. If things had been all right Tom and I'd have been married long ago."

The foreman nodded sympathetically. "How's poor Tom?" he asked. "Mending slowly, but still on crutches. It's been over six months now and the first two, you know, we didn't think he'd live. That's more of Half Cent's work. Tom was his best picker and in the hurry he kept Tom rushing days and half the nights and then sent him up to the top of that big seedling York to get the stray apples the other pickers had left. And do you know," two red spots burning in her cheeks, "that from the time Tom fell and was carried home old Half Cent has never sent to inquire after him once and he stopped Tom's pay the very day he was hurt."

"It's been a pretty heavy expense to Tom," sympathized the foreman. "He'd saved nearly enough to build a little house on the lot he bought, and that's gone, and he still owes the doctor some. I've been saving up to buy furniture and dishes, and this is my last day. Yes, I guess we're all in the same boat. You've got six to look out for, and Rosa's sold the cow and said she's earned. Oh-ho! Say, think there's any danger of a frost tonight?"

"Not the least. The thermometer has been rising for the last two hours. In fact, I believe the orchard boys are planning for a dance down the valley tonight."

"Better not let the owner hear of it," said Clara, shaking her head. "It would cost every last one of them his job. It's foolish to leave the orchard during the period of frost danger to the blossoms."

"No danger tonight," declared the foreman, "not in the least."

And so thought Clara when she went to her home through the immense blossom-laden apple orchard after her work was done. The air was almost mild and the night was clear and calm, with myriad stars in the sky, which showed as she passed beneath the trees. Down each alternate row were round black objects that looked like beasts of prey in the semidarkness of the undergrowth. But they were not. They were guards, more than a thousand stoves filled with crude petroleum and covering 200 acres of blossoming promised fruit. Near the far side of the orchard and only a few rods from the little house where Clara lived with her father was the guard house. Here twelve men slept, fully dressed in bunks, during the ten days or so of danger to the blossoming trees. When the nights were cloudless, still the

Improved Machinery Cuts Haying Costs

Farmers Forget That Easier Way Is Also Cheaper.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hay production in the eastern states is not managed so efficiently and economically, in many cases, as farther west, according to R. S. Washburn, of the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture. A study of haying on representative farms in Pennsylvania indicated that some farmers harvest and store an acre of hay with four hours of labor, whereas on other farms more than eight hours of labor is required. One element many farmers have overlooked is that the easier way is also the cheaper way.

The use of the side-delivery rake and the haylender may be expected to effect a saving of approximately one and one-half hours per acre of man labor and one-half hour per acre of horse work, as compared with the use of the dump rake and hand loading from the windrow. With wages at 40 cents an hour, says Mr. Washburn, this represents a saving of 60 cents per acre in man labor alone which, with 30 acres of hay amounts to $18, or more than enough to pay the interest and depreciation on the necessary investment in a side-delivery rake and haylender.

Unloading hay by hand is tedious and expensive. Economy is to be expected from the use of the double harpoon, grapple fork, or slings in unloading. A mower of 5-foot cut is mostly commonly used in the East. The 6 and 7-foot mowers used widely in the West allow for cutting an additional two acres in ten hours for each added foot of width. On farms which grow 40 acres or more of hay, the 12 or 14-foot rake should be used, says Mr. Washburn, in preference to the small one-horse rake. With the wider rake 50 per cent more ground can be covered in a day and the work is done more easily.

Dairy Herd Improvement Test Shows Profit Made

Analysis of more than 100,000 yearly individual records from cows on test in dairy herd improvement associations indicate that, on the average, cows that produced 100 pounds of butterfat a year returned $14 each over cost of feed; those that produced 200 pounds, $54 over cost of feed; 300 pounds, $86; 400 pounds, $138; and 500-pound cows returned $178 over cost of feed. Thus the man milking a 500-pound producer would have more return than if he milked a dozen 100-pound cows, and this would take no account of the added labor of milking and caring for the larger herd or of the much greater expense of providing stable room for a herd instead of a single animal. The figures from returns are based on farm prices from all parts of the country, including whole-milk districts.

Returning Manure to Worn Soils Profitable

Return of barnyard manure to worn soils has long been recognized as a profitable farm practice. In France, a farmer's prosperity often is measured in terms of the size of the manure pile which he has carefully built near his stable. He has learned so well to utilize manure that this method of judging him is a very good criterion. Soil conditions and cropping practices in the fertile cornbelt are very different, for the most part, from those in France. However, our soils are losing their virgin fertility rapidly and even now the most productive lands usually respond well in crop increases when manure is applied.

Sawdust and Shavings Tend to Make Soil Sour

Sawdust and shavings in manure tend to make the soil sour. If the manure used comes from stables, all shavings and sawdust should be removed if possible. The manure from sheep, pigeons, and chickens contains a great deal of food that the plants use. These manures are more valuable than the ordinary barnyard manures, but must not be spread too thickly over your garden. It is generally customary to work coarse manure into garden soil in the fall so that it will have time to decay. In the spring, well rotted manure can be worked into the soil with a digging fork.

Sell Young Ducks

Young ducks should be sold at the age of ten weeks or they will molt and lose weight very rapidly. Finding a good market seems to be a great difficulty with many growers but any of our large cities want good fat ducks most any time of the year and with the commission firms and express a good market should not be hard to find. The demand for good fat ducks was never better and as the demand for chickens increases, so it will for ducks.

By QUIN HALL.
ONE of the first of the intersectional struggles which comes under the heading of being important occurs this Saturday when Knute Rockne leads his Irishmen to Atlanta, Georgia, to play Georgia Tech.

These intersectional clashes are becoming as popular as the fellow who evaded the custom officers on the Canadian border and came through with a whole cat. It's getting so that some of the teams play little else but intersectional games, but it creates added interest in the gridiron pastime and makes tickets even more difficult to obtain—if that situation can be made worse.

Anyway, this classic between the Irish and the Golden Tornado is always looked forward to and this year, as usual, it will give the fans an early line on the strength of the two squads. Rockne has already been quoted as saying that he doesn't anticipate that the Irish will knock down the opposition as easily as they have been accustomed to doing, but then Rockne seldom brags. And for that matter what coach does?

Georgia Tech, under the captaincy of Peter Pund, will make a valiant attempt to prove to Mr. Rockne that he wasn't far wrong in his predicting, come Saturday.

Tech, it will be recalled, suffered its only defeat of last season at the hands of the Irish and it's no secret in Atlanta—even in parts of Atlanta away from the campus—that the Golden Tornado will be out for revenge in a big way.

It is pretty generally conceded that Georgia Tech will have the best team in the Southern Intercollegiate Conference, and when it is realized that this particular Conference is made up of twenty-two colleges, such a concession is no small honor. She had an unusually strong team in 1927, and, despite the loss of Captain Crowley and Hood, who made a name for himself as a tackle, it would seem that the experts have good ground for their prediction.

Last year's team was made up largely of sophomore material, and most of them are back in the mole-skins this season. Pund, this year's captain, made quite a reputation for himself as a centre last year and reports say that Tech will have an exceptionally strong line. In the backfield Coach Alexander will have at least two hard-driving backs who will be new to the circuit. These fellows, Lumpkin and Dunlap, were outstanding performers on the 1927 freshman team and they both possess speed and power.

Coach Alexander has Fincher, an especially good line coach, and Miller, a graduate from the noted

Four Horsemen, to aid him in his work at Georgia Tech. This should assure the Atlanta school of a sound system of play.

While Georgia Tech has a long schedule ahead of her and while Saturday's struggle with the Irish from South Bend will not count in the final standings of the team in the Southern Intercollegiate Conference, the game, nevertheless, is one of the most important on the schedule of the Golden Tornado. A victory over the Rockne coached team will give Georgia Tech an added reputation not only in the South, but all over the country as well.

Last year Georgia Tech with seven victories and one tie game had but one touchdown scored against it in the games played against other Conference teams. The Tech defense was one of the outstanding features of play in the South and while four teams—Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and North Carolina—finished their Conference games undefeated, Georgia Tech led the whole group in Conference victories—seven—while Tennessee and North Carolina were credited with five each and North Carolina won but four against Conference rivals.

The Golden Tornado always plays a hard game and under Pund great things are expected from the Atlanta school.

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgelow

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Fenimore Wilde, famous Broadway actor, dies, his young and pretty daughter Janet obtains a job with John Montague, theatrical impresario, while her brother Frank, an idler, goes South. Janet makes friends with Leonard Quigg, a temperamental musician, who loves her, and Dr. David Churchill. When Montague insults her Janet becomes Dr. Churchill's secretary. He tells her he is in love with her and wants to divorce his wife, so Janet gives up her position and goes to live with Chester Quigg, Leonard's arist uncle, and his charming little daughter, Alice. She learns how to placate old Mrs. Quigg. Chester's mother, and generally makes life pleasant for the Quiggs. Frank Wilde returns home, broke, and introduces Janet to Cora Niles, his sweetheart. John Montague dies and leaves $200,000 to Janet, and a few days later she meets Wyndham Stonor, English playwright, who becomes interested in her. But Janet is falling in love with Leonard. Alice Quigg becomes seriously ill and Dr. Churchill operates for mastoiditis. After the operation Janet returns to the studio to await further news from the hospital.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Chapter XXII.

JANET sat waiting, her nerves at tension. She could not sleep until she had heard that Alice had passed beyond danger. And even Alice was not as important as Leonard—Leonard who had kissed her. The memory of that kiss was poignant and sharp within her.

Changing into a negligee, she sat down to wait, but the strain was beginning to tell on her. And always Leonard. Now she was almost sure that he was the man—the man among men—but she was not quite sure. Even his kiss had not quite decided her. Was he sincere? Was a man ever to be relied upon? So ran her thoughts.

An hour after midnight, the front doorbell rang. Janet ran to answer it—and found David Churchill outside.

"How is she?" Janet asked eagerly, as he came in and closed the door. "How is she?"

"Now, keep calm," David ordered her, noting the hysteria that threatened. "Good news! The child is doing wonderfully. I can almost say that she is out of danger."

Janet broke into an uncontrollable fit of weeping.

"I expected you would do something like this," David said grimly. "That's why I came instead of telephoning! What are you making such a fuss about?" he went on with mock brutality. "I tell you, the child will be running about again before you know it—children are that way. Stop that crying! She's better!"

Suddenly Janet seized both his hands.

"You saved her!" she cried hysterically. "David, you're wonderful! I can never thank you enough!"

"Show a little gratitude, then!" he smiled. "I did a particularly clever operation, and I want a little sanity in return. I'll bet you haven't had anything to eat! Come across with the truth—have you?"

She shook her head, smiling through her tears, and then went on to pour out questions about the little patient, questions which he did his best to answer.

"All the same, just remember that I'm a surgeon and not a physician, will you?" he insisted. "What do I know about treating women's nerves? I prescribe, for lack of anything better, an omelette, and you may remember that I am undoubtedly the best cook in New York. Even if you aren't hungry, I am, I didn't have any dinner."

"You didn't dine because you were watching over Alice?" she interrupted gratefully.

"I am hungry, anyway," he repeated, "and I won't eat alone! Is this your boasted hospitality? Lead me to the kitchen—and let's see what I can do!"

He flung off his coat and vest, took off his collar and tie, and rolled up his shirt sleeves.

"The kitchen!" he demanded.

Soon David came in with a large tray. On it were two big omelettes, appetizingly light and brown, with a pot of steaming coffee.

"I can't even stop to put on my coat!" he announced.

"Don't talk with your mouth full!" Janet laughed at him.

"David, this omelette is superb!"

"I told you I was the best cook in New York!" he boasted happily.

The meal over, they sat talking, and Janet was grateful to him in that neither by word nor expression did he remind her of what had happened between them. His attitude was that of a brother and he chaffed impersonally and comfortably as such.

Suddenly the door bell rang again.

"Who on earth can it be?" Janet demanded. "Unless it's Chester, and then he would have to have come by aeroplane." She hurried to the door.

"Who is it?" she called out.

"Western Union!" a man's voice answered, and Janet opened the door.

She was pushed violently aside as three men forced their way in—two burly looking fellows who obviously were detectives, and a little gray-haired man who seemed to be in charge of proceedings.

"What do you mean?" Janet demanded angrily, but they passed into the studio, where David had just picked up his collar.

"You see all this, boys?" the gray-haired man said sharply. "This is Dr. Churchill—and you'll note that he is without coat or collar—and the lady in the negligee is Miss Janet Wilde! That will be all! I thank you, Doctor! It may interest you to know that I am Mrs. Churchill's attorney—and you will hear from me in due course."

"But this is an outrage!" Janet burst out. "How dare you force your way in here—Dr. Churchill had just called to tell me about one of his patients, a little girl to whom I was devoted."

"Yep!" one of the detectives sneered. "That's right, too! He would call at this hour—wouldn't he? And he would take his coat and vest off! Sure!"

"Sure he would!" the other laughed raucously.

"I don't know if this is a frame-up or what it is," David interrupted. "All the same, you'll have an awful job to hang anything on a doctor! I am entitled to pay a visit at any hour of the twenty-four I care to!"

"But the lady has admitted—before witnesses—that she is not the patient," the lawyer returned. "However, that can be fought out in court. Come along, boys! We've seen all we want to!"

"Oh, I won't stand this!" Janet began, when David spoke quietly to her.

"Let them go!"

And when they had gone, Janet and David stood facing each other. "I'm terribly sorry this happened," he said weakly. "I can only imagine that Amy is insane."

Janet told him of the incident with Wyndham Stonor and David whistled his dismay.

"She must hate you," he said.

"I am trying not to be glad."

"What have you got to be glad about?" Janet snapped briskly.

He looked at her and smiled.

"Don't you see?" he began, slowly. "Evidently Amy has made up her mind to divorce me."

"Well?" Janet looked at him defiantly.

"You know, and I know, that tonight was a perfectly innocent affair," David went on in a matter-of-fact voice.

"Naturally!"

"At the same time these fellows Amy hired," he continued, "burst in at an unlucky moment. The State of New York demands a certain costume for a divorce party and, quite innocently we happened to be wearing it. How could I know they were going to burst in when I went to cook that omelette? I am awfully sorry, Janet—that is, I'm sorry for you—but it seems as if Amy will be able to prove a lie. In that case, I am the winner?"

"How are you the winner?" she asked icily.

He did not reply until he had reached the door, and opened it.

"Because, my dear," he said on the threshold, "because I am afraid—from your point of view—that I shall get what I want. You'll have to marry me, Janet!"

She stood there looking at the door, which closed upon him.

SECRETARY MELLON DEFENDS COOLIDGE ECONOMY AND REPLIES TO GOVERNOR AL SMITH

a veritable hornet's nest. Republican leaders at once jumped into the controversy.

A few hours after Smith's words went before the country over the radio, Chairman Work of the republican national committee gave out a statement taking issue with him, denying his charge, and characterizing the democratic candidate, sarcastically, "by his own admission the greatest financial expert New York state has ever had."

Then Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who usually lets political controversies rage about him unnoticed, issued an eight-page statement in which he went into detail to refute Smith's charges. Mellon took the attack upon him personally.

"Smith, he said, 'undertook to challenge my good faith and to accuse me of presenting a false picture to the nation.'"

Hoover is expected to bring the controversy to its climax in his New York speech by a careful analysis of the administration's financial record, but, as usual, without mentioning the democratic presidential candidate by name. The implication will be sufficient in Smith's own state. Smith criticized Hoover by name in his Sedalia speech.

Hoover was completing his New York address today. It will be the high-light of his campaign. At the same time, the republican candidate is arranging details of his trip to California. It appears very probable now that he will make the one formal radio address on his way west at St. Louis, in the border state battleground of Missouri, instead of in the northwest. The date for the speech has been fixed tentatively for Nov. 2.

Statements of denial were issued here today relative to two charges brought against Hoover, one questioning his American citizenship, and another that he had held down the price of the 1919 wheat crop, the latter being used in the campaign among the farmers against him.

Farm Revolt

By SENATOR REED SMOOT
GOVERNOR SMITH cannot capitalize any so-called "farm revolt" in the West. My observations in the vast western country are that the great majority of the voters cannot be won away from the Republican party.

This applies particularly to the farmers, because they realize that year in and year out the party which now presents Hoover and Curtis has been their consistent friend, and has the record to prove it.

Within the last year agricultural conditions have improved. The Democratic plan to reduce the prices the farmer pays by lowering the tariff on industrial commodities would ruin the home market for American farmers.

BREASTING ATLANTIC IN TINY MOTH PLANE

in a light DeHaviland Moth plane, with only 100 gallons of fuel. His margin of safety gradually neared the vanishing point this afternoon. Officials of the DeHaviland Co., makers of the plane, told the United Press:

"Commander MacDonald had 100 gallons of fuel aboard when he started. It is difficult to estimate how long he could remain in the air, because the speed of the wind is unknown. However, we can assume he is using four to four and one-half gallons of fuel an hour."

At a consumption of four gallons an hour, MacDonald would have a margin of 25 hours. Using four and one-half gallons, his margin would be cut to 22 hours. The 22 hours was up at 9:40 A. M. EST.

However, while unfavorable weather prevailed in his course approaching Ireland, west winds reported across the Atlantic may have enabled the flier to conserve his fuel. Visibility was good on the south coast of Ireland, but earlier it had been poor, and similar conditions prevailed elsewhere, so that MacDonald could cross the coast without being observed.

Work

By MRS. RAYMOND ROBINS
National Director of Republican Campaign Among Industrial Women

THE higher wages, shorter hours and social gains which the American working man and woman now enjoy will be challenged in the next four years, and can be protected only by the election of the right President.

For twenty years my husband and I lived on the top floor of a Chicago tenement. I know what poverty means to little children and mothers in tenement houses.

In my opinion, Herbert Hoover, too, understands fully the haunting fear of losing one's job. He is the first candidate for President who has ventured the assertion that poverty can be abolished.

ASK FOR NEARLY 200 ADDITIONAL MILES TRUCK LINES

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 18.—(UP)—Nearly 200 additional miles of motor truck freight lines were asked in four petitions upon which hearings were set today by the state railroad and warehouse commission.

Continuance of an already existing line was asked in another petition, filed by W. O. Nesset and Ernest Andering, Mahanomen. The line would extend from Detroit Lakes to Mahanomen. Hearing was set for Nov. 2 at Detroit Lakes.

In the other petitions application was made:

Silas M. Severson, Staples, asked permission to operate two lines, one from Little Falls to Wadena, 58 miles, and one from Staples to Brainerd, 30 miles. Hearing was set for Oct. 30 at Little Falls.

Cesare Appino, Ironton, requested the right to operate one line daily from Brainerd to Aitkin, 33 miles and return. Hearing was set for Oct. 30 at Brainerd.

Henry M. Rodseth, Crookston, asked permission to operate round trip daily a line from Crookston to Bagley, 70 miles. Hearing was set for Nov. 2 at Crookston.

IS MOST GENTLE HOLDUP IN ANNALS OF MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Perhaps the most genteel holdup in the history of Minneapolis police annals was made known today by Mrs. L. B. Hessler, wife of a Minnesota University English professor.

Mrs. Hessler said that she was approached near her home last night by a youth who lifted his hat respectfully, produced a gun and said: "I'm sorry, madam, I hate to do this, but I am forced to hold you up."

The professor's wife said she gave the bandit $1 and a scolding which ended with a warning that such acts as his led to a criminal career.

"Necessity knows no law," the bandit replied and lifting his hat again was gone.

Hooverizing Statute Books

Hoover induced paving brick manufacturers to reduce standard sizes from sixty-six to five; eliminated seventy or seventy-four sizes of beds. It would make a lawyer shudder to think what he might do with the statute books.

RESTOCK CRAPPIES IN EDWARD, MARQUIS

Ten Cans of Fingerlings From Game and Fish Department Hatchery Coming

TO ARRIVE SATURDAY

Will Make Crappies Fishing in the Two Lakes Good After Three Years

Ten cans of crappies containing approximately 3,000 fingerlings will be received in Brainerd Saturday by Al Weideman, president of the Crow Wing County Game and Fish Club for distribution in two county lakes, Marquis and Edward.

The shipment will arrive from the State Game and Fish Hatchery at Glenwood. Two cans will be allotted to Marquis and eight to Lake Edward. The shipment will be hauled from Brainerd to the two lakes by J. F. Cibazar, Brainerd.

The crappies supply comes following a request for fingerlings to restock these two lakes, which are without crappies.

Mr. Weideman announced today that as a result of this restocking both lakes would be made into good fishing lakes for crappies in three years.

He pointed out that seven years ago he had put 22 cans of sunfish into Lake Edward taken from the natural fish hatchery at Gull lake and that now that lake was unequalled in the district for angling of that particular fish.

Brainerd Hiking Club Inaugurates Season With Pleasant Outing Last Evening

PLAN FUTURE HIKES

Gather Around Campfire for Lunch and Talks After Walk on Scenic River Drive

Over 30 enthusiastic hikers inaugurated the season of the Brainerd Hiking club last evening with a jaunt to Ahrens hill.

Arriving at Ahrens, the hikers were welcomed by a committee headed by Lawrence Ericson, who had prepared coffee. Sitting around the campfire the members ate sandwiches and drank hot coffee.

After lunch a brief business meeting was held and another hike announced for next Wednesday evening. A hike to the Baxter school house is proposed.

The hikers reached Ahrens hill after walking on the Scenic River drive. They met at the court house at 7:30 P. M.

PILLAGER GARAGE

ROBBED LAST NIGHT

Thieves last night robbed the Satter and Gardner garage at Pillager after midnight and their loot, valued at $200, included balloon tires, tubes and batteries. The garage firm is a sub-dealer of the Tyrholm Company of Brainerd. No clue to the thieves has been found.

PARENT-TEACHERS CENTRAL COUNCIL

A preliminary meeting to form a central Parent-Teachers association council was held in the city hall last evening. The council will be composed of the executive committees of the six Parent-Teachers associations of the city, all of which were represented at last night's meeting. Mayor Frank E. Little acted as temporary chairman last evening with Art Hagerberg acting as temporary secretary.

The election of officers of the association will be held on Nov. 14 at the city hall, when the work will get further under way.

ENTERTAINMENT OF BEST

Mrs. Margaret Beebe, Chautauqua Representative Announces Over 600 Pledge Tickets Taken

The American Legion and Auxiliary, of Brainerd will sponsor the appearances here next year of City Circuit of Associated Chautauquas, the largest and finest circuit in the United States sending out only outstanding attractions.

Ordinarily the City Circuit only plays the larger cities but for the first time are taking in Iron Range towns thereby making it possible to play Brainerd also.

Over six hundred season adults tickets have been pledged by Mrs. Margaret Beebe, representative of Associated Chautauquas. She wishes to thank the people of Brainerd for their splendid cooperation and response.

The shows to be brought to this city for Chautauqua week will be of the best in educational and cultural entertainment.

Mother's Faith Is Theme of "Four Sons"

"Four Sons," Fox production, is the feature today and tomorrow at the Lyceum theatre where it opened last night.

Briefly, it is the simple, intensely human story of a mother and her four sons. The theme is faith—the faith of the mother in humanity. In spite of all the troubles that beset the old lady, her confidence remains unbroken.

There are contrasting backgrounds of America and Bavaria during the War. It is not a War picture, however, there being only a flash of the battlefield, depicting the meeting of the two brothers in opposing armies. This scene is one of the emotional highlights of the picture.

ROTARIANS FETE TEACHERS TUESDAY

Club Prepares for Annual Social Event on Evening of October 23

IN IRON EXCHANGE HALL

Banquet to be Served by Ladies of the Eastern Star at 6:45 O'clock

Preparations continued today for the annual teachers and welfare workers of Brainerd banquet to be given by the Brainerd Rotary club next Tuesday evening at 6:45 o'clock in the Iron Exchange hall.

The banquet will be served by the ladies of the Eastern Star.

Former banquets tendered the teachers and welfare workers have always been of mutual pleasure to the Rotarians and their guests and this year even more elaborate arrangements are being made to make the event entirely successful.

The program will include music, song, talks and "stunts." Hal Day is in charge of the entertainment.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

October 18, 1903
E. K. Woodin was taken down with smallpox yesterday and the Woodin home is now quarantined. Mr. Woodin's condition is not at all serious, but there is no mistaking the contagion, and Dr. Thabes is taking every precaution to prevent its spreading.

C. L. Burnett is suffering from a very sore hand. A few days ago while opening a box of goods he thrust a nail in his hand and blood poisoning set in making it necessary for him to have the injured member operated on.

A crew of men is at work today rearranging the west end of the depot building. The entire space in the west end of the house will be used as the express and baggage room in the future.

Frank Walker took charge of the Kaupp Brothers meat market again this morning and many of his old friends will be glad to see him in the harness again.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ames will leave tonight for St. Paul, the former as a witness in a lawsuit and the latter to visit for a few days.

Ole Reigman and family have arrived from near Willmar and have moved into their house at 713 North Ninth street, recently purchased from P. B. Nettleton. They are much pleased with Brainerd.

Miss Grace McConnell, who has been a guest in the city of Mrs. C. D. McKay left this afternoon for her home in St. Cloud.

Mrs. Martin of St. Paul, who has been visiting in the city with Mrs. Ellen Spalding left this afternoon for her home.

Major Scott returned from the Twin Cities today.

AULGER BROTHERS CREATE NEW HIT

Each Individual Play Has Been Ably Presented in Appearance Here

CHARACTERS WELL TAKEN

Will Appear in "In Love With Love" at Park Theatre Tonight

It is with pleasure and due appreciation to the ability of each individual character artist that one welcomes each play offered by the Aulger Brothers Stock Company and it is with the knowledge that each presentation is wholesome, well acted, and entertaining that affords complete confidence in the appearance of the company here.

The Aulger Brothers Company will present its fourth play of its season at the Park Theatre tonight, "In Love With Love," and judging from such admirable plays as "The Home Towners," "New Brooms" and "Our Children," presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday respectively, none will be disappointed in tonight's offering or the three to follow, "Pig" Friday, "Saintly Hypocrites and Honest Sinners" Saturday, and "Married and How" Sunday, matinee and evening.

Those who failed to see "Our Children" last evening missed a good clean play of such merit as is not often seen in Brainerd. The play had an interesting theme and was presented in a delightful manner.

HUDSON SUPER 6

A thrilling NEW DISCOVERY
in performance and in value

"It made a Hudson owner of me."

"It changed my whole idea of motor values."

"It showed me that high price is not necessary to own a great car."

Thousands of riders talking like this. A great Hudson program of personal demonstration brought these values home with the impact of a new discovery.

We have never heard such praise of a car. People comparing it to cars costing two or three times as much. Saying it is the easiest riding car they ever drove—saying it is smoother—saying it outperforms all cars of their experience.

In this special month of personal demonstration thousands have ridden in the advanced Hudson Super-Six.

Even those who owned and admired Hudson Super-Sixes of previous issue, have no conception of the superlative quality expressed both mechanically and in body beauty of the great Hudsons of today.

The extraordinary speed of Hudson getaway is but a single expression of the brilliant activity of the New Hudson Super-Six, which is carried on to every phase of performance. And with it a gasoline efficiency that alters all previous standards.

A single ride will explain why this has been the most enthusiastically accepted Hudson ever built.

have ridden in the advanced Hudson Super-Six.

Even those who owned and admired Hudson Super-Sixes of previous issue, have no conception of the superlative quality expressed both mechanically and in body beauty of the great Hudsons of today.

The extraordinary speed of Hudson getaway is but a single expression of the brilliant activity of the New Hudson Super-Six, which is carried on to every phase of performance. And with it a gasoline efficiency that alters all previous standards.

A single ride will explain why this has been the most enthusiastically accepted Hudson ever built.

SAFE AFTER FREAK ACCIDENT

Al Mangel, seated thoughtfully on top of his motor car after being struck by another car going seventy miles an hour in Chicago. Though Mangel's sturdy automobile accomplished three somersaults and landed in a tailspin, he escaped alive, uncut, unbruised, very conscious.

CITATION FOR HEARING ON PETITION TO SELL, MORTGAGE OR LEASE LAND

No. 2528
State of Minnesota, County of Crow Wing, ss. In Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Freeman Thorp, Decedent.
The State of Minnesota to all persons interested in the sale of certain lands belonging to said estate. The petition of Joseph G. Heald as representative of the above named estate, being duly filed in this court representing that it is necessary and for the best interest of said estate and of all interested therein that certain lands of said estate described therein be sold and praying that a license be to him granted to sell the same.

No. Therefore, You and each of you, are hereby cited and required to show cause, if any you have, before this court, at the Probate Court Rooms, in the Court House in the City of Brainerd, County of Crow Wing, State of Minnesota, on the 12th day of November, 1928, at 10 o'clock A. M. why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

WITNESS, The Judge of said court, and the seal of said court, this 15th day of October, 1928.

L. B. KINDER,
Judge of Probate Court.

MAL CLARK,
Attorney for Petitioner, 11613Th

Order of Notice Thereon
United States of America, District of Minnesota, ss.
On this 24th day of June, A. D. 1926, on reading the foregoing petition, it is ORDERED BY THE COURT, that a hearing be had upon the same on the 24th day of November, A. D. 1928, before said court, at Duluth, in said district, at ten o'clock in the forenoon; and that notice thereof be published in The Dispatch, a newspaper printed at Brainerd in said district, and that all known creditors and other persons in interest may appear at the said time and place and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of the said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered by the Court, that the Clerk shall send by mail, upon payment by the bankrupt, of his attorney of the actual expense thereof, to all known creditors copies of said petition and all orders addressed to them at their places of residence as stated.

WITNESS the Honorable WILLIAM A. CANT, Judge of said court, and the seal thereof, at Duluth, in said district, on the 24th day of June, A. D. 1926.

JOEL M. DICKEY,
(Seal of the Court) Clerk.

Deputy Clerk.

RELIEF FROM CURSE
OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright Get 24 for 25c to-day at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Johnson's Pharmacy and Economy Drug Co.

HASSELL, CRAMER ARRIVE AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Oct. 18.—(UP)—Bert J. Hassell and Jarker Cramer, whose attempted flight to Sweden from Rockford, Ill., ended in Greenland, arrived here today, en route back to Rockford for a homecoming celebration.

The fliers were met at the Chicago Union station by Mayor Burt Allen, of Rockford, and a number of Rockford business men. The committee extended escorted them to a special train which will carry them back to Rockford.

Luncheon Dainty
Young Marjorie returned from a luncheon party full of enthusiasm.

"And mother," said she, recounting the features of the occasion, "We had tuna fish in camisoles."

How to Reduce Varicose Veins

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will reduce swollen veins and bunches.

If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil, full strength at any first-class drug store and apply it night and morning as directed you will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

Moore's Emerald Oil is a harmless, yet most powerful germicide and two ounces last a very long time. Indeed, so powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. H. P. Dunn sells lots of it.
